AUTHORHOUSE, United States, 2005. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 223 x 147 mm. Language: English Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.A collection of extraordinary essays written by Advanced Placement (AP) US Government students at West Potomac High School in Fairfax, County, Virginia, White House Under Fire delves into the political consequences facing the President of the United States as he makes fateful decisions affecting, at least, the map of the US and, in some cases, the future of the world. The students explore such challenging topics as Jefferson's controversial purchase of the Louisiana Territory, Woodrow Wilson's reluctance to embrace the Women's Suffrage movement, the reactions of Herbert Hoover and Franklin Delano Roosevelt to the Great Depression, Harry Truman's decision to drop the atomic bomb on Japan, Nixon's opening to China and his downfall from the Watergate scandal, and George W. Bush's response to the attack on New York and Washington, September 11, 2001. This work highlights some of the most dangerous and controversial periods in American history, from the confrontation with the Soviet Union over access to Berlin and missiles in Cuba to war with Spain. On the domestic front, the students tackle Andrew Jackson's Bank War, Lincoln's response to the South's secession and Ronald Reagan's decision to fire the Air Traffic Controllers. Harry Truman, who served as president before these students' parents were born, turns out to be their favorite - with seven essays devoted to his presidency, including the creation of the nation of Israel, his authorization of the Berlin Airlift, the Communist invasion of South Korea, his firing of the popular General Douglas MacArthur and his desegregation order to the US military. These students take a fresh, young approach to the American presidency and how...
